To

Keith D. Giessler

After waiting years to pursue his dream of a higher education because he had been convinced he was too stupid to succeed, in May 2009 Keith graduated with honors from Xavier University in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Supporting him during his initial fear filled forays onto campus, typing his papers, assisting him with his research, attending campus events with him, helping fill out financial aid papers, celebrating with him when he made the Dean's list, and reading him Plato's The Cave, allowed me to see the college process from a student's point of view; a point of view I had not experienced for more than twenty years. Keith's willingness to share his academic life with me has made me a better professor.
